October 14, 2009 By WolfX5 I actually bought this from another retailer (sorry Amazon, I love you!) and I'm VERY pleased with the performance of this camera. I actually have mounted mine outside the house using the (included) aluminum mounting bracket. Please note that this camera is NOT waterproof therefore I have it mounted under the eaves where it will not get wet. While not specifically marketed as an outdoor camera, I'm happy to report it working extremely well in that capacity. The operating temperature is rated only for 14 - 120 degrees so when the bitter winds of winter begin to blow I will have to take the camera down for a few months :-(As others have stated, the picture quality is PERFECT (all digital using Frequency-Hopping Spread Spectrum). The camera will automatically switch to a very powerful infrared illuminator at dusk and it lights up the whole entry way of my house (about a 30 ft wide swath). The only annoyance is that Uniden didn't think to put a switch to turn the I/R illuminator OFF which would come in really handy if you wanted to mount the camera indoors looking out through a pane of glass. In this case the I/R illuminator reflects off the glass immediately in front of the camera rendering the image useless so either plan to use this camera OUTDOORS or INDOORS but not INDOORS LOOKING OUTDOORS. Inside the home the I/R illumination is ridiculously bright and fills the entire room with invisible light which only the camera can pick up. The camera also has the ability to auto-cycle between up to 4 cameras at pre-set intervals of time (5/10/15/20 seconds) and has the ability to watch all 4 cameras at once in QUAD mode. I haven't tried the included PC software that records all of this but other users seem to be happy with this function. The range is good, it will penetrate my home about 120' but struggles a bit when the signal comes from outdoors to my basement. Both the camera and the monitor use Lithium-Ion batteries so the recharge time is quick and they last for hours (there are included power adaptors for both camera and monitor included). Overall Uniden did an EXCELLENT job with this packaged system and I've been very happy with it - highly recommended! 2 Comments | Was this review helpful to you? I tried a few devices like the Summer Infant Day and Night analog Video monitor. These were terrible...constant static, poor picture, and not secure at all. Your neighbors can eaves drop on your signal. This Uniden was quite nice: Very clear Digital picture, secure with its digital frequency hopping and very easy to set up...you basically plug it in and turn it on. PROS: * Actually can continuously monitor your child constantly and not limited to the sound trigger only mode that most other baby monitors have. This sound trigger only mode only sends video and audio to the receiver when there is a sound picked up by the camera. While other digital monitoring systems offers only this mode, the Uniden does not offer it at all, which is kind of a negative. * great picture on the receiver...good color pic during the day and excellent night vision black and white pic.Absolutely NO static or interference. * Both the camera and the receiver has rechargeable LiON batteries that runs 4 to 5 hours!! great for moving around from room to room...very convenient without having to drag an AC plug everywhere. \ * Comes with good wall mount bracket which allows you to also use it as a desktop stand for the camera in case you dont want to screw it to a ceiling or wall. You can adjust the angle with this bracket. CONS: * The volume on the receiver is set to max but is is soooo low. its ok at night when you are sleeping but you will not be able to hear if you have the TV cranked up. * Interferes with my WiFi Router big time. When I have the camera and receiver on, my wireless download speed drops by 90%!!!! This is ok for now since I use this only at night when I'm not on my wireless network. * It has a motion detector in the camera but can only be used with the lap top recording feature. it would be nice to have it so that it can trigger an alarm on the receiver or even turn the receiver video screen on only when motion is detected...but no such luck there. * Does not have a feature like most baby monitors where the receiver is only activated when there is sound detected (I actually do not like this feature but good to have this option if needed). This unit only has a AUTO setting on the receiver which turns off the video after a timer. However the audio still continues which is good in baby monitoring cases. * This is terrible. If you turn off the camera, the receiver only shows a display "no signal" on the screen...no audible alarm!! this is useless if you are sleeping and somehow you lose connection to your camera...you will never know unless you look at the screen. During this time...who knows what is going on with your baby!! * Uniden tech support is terrible. When you call in, you are taken to a maze of options that do everything to keep you from a live person. I selected an option which was not even related to my product just to get a live person (after 3 attempts). Finally I got someone who was clueless of even the most basic product features. They did not even have an option for this product in the phone menus. I was told that a senior tech support rep would call back in 30 minutes...still no call back. 7 Comments | Was this review helpful to you? We were constantly battling interference and long cords as we moved the 2 (for 2 babies) monitors from room to room.Then shopping at Sams club this week I saw the Uniden set and decided to give it change out of frustration with the other set. With the Uniden we only need a single monitor and 2 cameras. The monitor is rechargeable so it can go cordless during the day. Interference is a thing of the past now. The monitor lets you scan through up to 4 cameras at varying intervals or you can put all cameras on the screen at once. You can manully scan between cameras and even zoom in and stayed zoomed! Since I bought 2 systems, I will buy some more cameras and use the second monitor for monitoring outdoors. The old baby monitor are going on Craigs List or Ebay as soon as I can get them packaged up. It's so nice to have something work as expected right out of the package. 6 MONTH UPDATE: So, we've been using this monitor for 6 months now and you know what? WE STILL LOVE IT! The monitor is basically keeping track of two 1+ kids during nap time (roughly 4 hrs per day) and we drag it all over the house. We also use the monitor when out in the backyard pool and the kid(s) are inside sleeping. The only issue is with heavy use the battery is right on the edge of being drained at the end of the day. But of course it includes a rechargeable battery so no problema! I've never had any video freezing problems or audio problems, nothing. 10 Comments | Was this review helpful to you? Generally but not always, the smaller the camera device the easier it is to hide or disguise and the smaller it is the easier it is to make it portable. Portable Surveillance camera systems differ from standard counterparts simply because they are portable. A typical digital surveillance camera is not portable, in fact it is usually securely mounted to some surface with screws. However, if a system is portable, what does that mean for the "system." It means that the camera and the DVR must be in the same "unit" in order to be entirely portable. In addition batteries or some sort of portable power pack are also required for a portable surveillance camera. Portable surveillance cameras have many applications. "Helmet cams" are one such application that enables "hands free" portable video recording because the unit is attached to a helmet that is worn by the user. Some examples of helmet cam use include skydiving, the aerospace industry, medicine, mining, and down-hill skiing. Another type of portable surveillance camera is often referred to as a "bumper cam." Although the camera is usually not attached directly to the bumper, an on board high speed digital color video camera system is normally attached on a vehicle with the camera's target area being somewhere behind or at the rear of the vehicle. This type of camera set up is often used to aid the driver when backing up or for monitoring the "rear view" when abnormally large payloads make this difficult using just mirrors. Perhaps one of the most frequently used overt applications of a portable surveillance camera is in surveillance and security of mass transit vehicles. School buses are now being equipped with on board high speed digital color video camera systems to monitor the students' as well as the drivers' activities. The mere presence of a portable surveillance camera unit in school buses has drastically reduced the number of disorderly conduct cases among transporting students. When incidences do arise, the system can provided a recorded audio/video account providing protection to both students and drivers. Subways and mass transit buses are employing on board systems not only to provide security/surveillance but to deter and prevent false injury claims. Mass transit vehicles equipped with portable surveillance cameras systems have shown drastically reduced crime rates. In addition, these systems can provide monitoring of passengers in the event of an accident, helping to keep false injury claims at a minimum and insurance rates low. Yet another popular application of portable surveillance cameras is legal work for police. FBI, DEA, etc.. In addition, police departments across the world are instituting the use of on portable surveillance cameras to provide evidence and monitor activity of potential law breakers. Highway pursuits, disorderly conduct cases during police stops, and an array of other activities are recorded and may be used as evidence if necessary. They also can protect officers from false claims of inappropriate behavior. Portable surveillance cameras consist of a small, compact color digital camera, a self contained power supply if necessary, and a high speed video processor and recorder. Most systems also include a small liquid crystal display or LCD monitor. Many on board systems record video to compact flash cards or other types of "flash" memory so that vibration that could interfere with hard drive use has no effect on recording. There are several additional features available today for portable surveillance cameras. Systems can be purchased that include an optional Global Positioning System or GPS module. These systems can record the coordinates as well as the speed of a vehicle and display it on-screen superimposed over the video captured by the system's camera. Timer kits are also available. They are useful for racing applications where lap times, equipment changes, and over all race timing are required. This can be an invaluable tool for any race team. As you can see there are a wide variety of applications for on board high speed digital color video camera systems and there is also a wide variety of accessories and features that are available to enhance their productivity. Speak with one of our digital security experts to determine which system and features are right for your application by contacting them via on-line Live Chat or by telephone at 866-573-8878 Monday through Friday from 9AM to 6PM EST. Rated 4 out of 5 Â by bearsfan10021 This camera is great for the price. We use it in our toodler's room to monitor while we are in other rooms of the house. The only drawback I have found is color quality. Dark colored items appear as purplish. One of the best features is the night vision quality. I love this camera and use it all the time. I would definitely recommend to all those worried parents with young kids 12/02/2011 Rated 5 out of 5 Â by waybetterthanplastic super easy set up and goes beyond as stated Whole system took less then ten minutes to set up and battery life, at least for camera, went well beyond four hours which was better than expected. Color a bit off but let's face facts, this is not used for movie making purposes... it is for security, etc. It worked better than I expected and would recommend it completely. Camera unit is a bit bigger than a Smart phone. No sound is only downfall. Viewing is extremely simple. Five stars... 08/30/2012 Rated 4 out of 5 Â by dblztuff Pretty good camera. We use it as a baby monitor because we got sick of the Summer Infant being so bad with tons of static anything farther than 10 feet from a room. This is great. For some reason this one, possibly this particular one has small high pitch interference type wine. Not sure if it's the 2.4 ghz signal or what but not enough to keep you awake. 11/19/2011 Rated 5 out of 5 Great Baby Monitor It may not be a great security camera but it is an excellent baby monitor. Nice big screen and a clear picture. For a baby monitor the range is great. I can take it outside no problem as long as I have the antennas up.Others said it was not loud enough but it has been plenty loud for us. We have had it for two months now. We have it mounted on the wall across from the crib and swing. We are thinking about getting a second camera because it was a better view when we had it mounted above the crib instead of across the room. But we wanted to see the swing too for when she falls asleep there. Also the second camera can be moveable and not mounted.The only problem with it as a baby monitor is that there is no warning beep or alarm to tell you that signal has been lost or power loss or????? so if your sleeping or not paying attention you may all of a sudden realize you have a blank screen and you have no idea if they are crying or what. 09/12/2011 See All Reviews Product Warranty and Service Plan Options Top of Page Product warranty: 1 Year See details Walmart Product Care Plans A limited product warranty is included free for most items. stands at the forefront of national companies offering this type of service. Key Considerations of a Portable Surveillance Trailer System A mobile surveillance trailer offers the perfect solution when the use of mobile security is required. But there are a few key factors that should be taken into consideration. In order to fulfill the customer's needs, the surveillance trailer would be customized specifically for surveillance purposes and personally tailored to the customer's specific requirements. The portable surveillance trailer must be designed for mobility, with cctv cameras that mount high on a mast for the optimum visibility. Statistics show that most crimes are committed after dark. Therefore, the most effective camera system should consist of fixed and pan zoom systems with high resolution day & night infrared capability. Standard systems are great for day time use but aren't that practical for night time security as they are not very efficient at seeing in the dark. The unit must be easily installed and broken down and easily moved from location to location. The portable surveillance trailer should be able to be customized to the customer's budget and specific requirements. If required, the portable surveillance system should be able to function without the use of conventional power if it will be used for construction site security or other types of remote sites. The perfect surveillance option would include either solar and battery power or both. The portable surveillance system should be able to operate without the use of conventional power if it will be used for construction site security or other types of remote sites. The perfect portable surveillance option would include either solar and battery power or both. The surveillance trailer must be easily secured by maximum locking capability. The inside of the surveillance trailer is home to all of the most sensitive equipment. This usually includes a power supply, rechargeable batteries, solar back up equipment, DVR with computer hard drive, router, mobile broadband card, power gauges and timers. The complete surveillance package should record and stream video back to the home base or office. Once the portable surveillance trailer is set up the systems would be activated. It then had the capability to record 24 hours a day and then would broadcast high-resolution real-time video with the use of a wireless broadband connection to a live video monitoring station. The surveillance trailer could even utilize a land line telephone connection if it was conveniently available. The streaming video would be recorded and the site would be monitored back at the home or office. But because most theft occurs at night or on weekends and holidays, this type of video monitoring is not really the best use of such sophisticated equipment. But most important of all, the surveillance trailer package should include the option of live video monitoring for the most efficient and effective use of resources. Ideally, any good surveillance trailer company should offer the added feature of live, real time event based video monitoring. Why video monitoring? Live video monitoring offers the most comprehensive and efficient use of this type of security investment. The best, most economical and wisest surveillance trailer package would actually use their own in house video monitoring agents. This is when the use of the surveillance trailer really does the best job. Surveillance trailers have numerous applications. It is imperative to economically monitor and protect these remote sites. A portable surveillance trailer can do both. Mobile and temporary parking lot security Remote monitoring of hazardous events A surveillance trailer is especially suited to remote monitoring of areas where there are chemical spills, fires and accidents.
